We see it stated that Mr. Richard H. Dans, Jr., of Boston, is to run against Gen. Butler as a Republican candidate for Congress in the Fifth District of Massachusetts. Butler has been nominated by the regular Convention of the district, but a large number of Republicans don't like him, and mean to beat him if they can. In order to do it, they have selected an eminent citizen, of great distinction as a lawyer, and a reputation enviable alike for integrity Dress and Cloak Making ceed with him is another question. In 1866 Gen. Butler received 9,021 votes to 2.858 for his Democratic antagonist. The hostility to him among the Republicans is now evidently very great, but it is hardly propable that it will prove powerful enough to take from him the half of the whole Republican vote; and unless it does, the contest against him will be fruitless. A CORRESPONDENT of the Columbus Statesman, writing from Gallon, Ohio, gives an account of a speech delivered at that point by General Blair. The tober.

Late Arizonia advices state that owmeeting was arranged in a hurry, the speaker being obliged to stop there for a few hours in the evening to make a railroad connection. He did not have his manuscript with him, and naturally he spoke his mind. He called Congress a 'rump" and a "fragment" a great many times, the reconstructed State governments "usurpations," and declared the President's oath ought to lead him to break up and destroy them. He called Mr. Stanton a greater rebeit han Stephens, of Georgia, and said that when the former imprisoned the latter "the patriot was in prison, the rebel out." This correspondent thinks the haragee much more revolutionary! meeting was arranged in a hurry, the lead him to break up and destroy them.

He called Mr. Stanton a greater rebel than Stephens, of Georgia, and said that when the former imprisoned the latter "the patriot was in prison, the latter "the patriot was in prison, the rebel out." This correspondent thinks the harsgue much more revolutionary than the Brodhead letter, and regrets that it was not reported verbatim to be used by the Republicans as a campaign document.

D'Israell has issued an address to his constituents of Buckinghamshire, reciting the course pursued by their Minister on questions of Reform, the national finance relations between England and foreign nations, and the triumphant termination of the Abyssinian war. He comments at length on the Reform project, gives its history, and recounts his objections thereto. He holds that the Ministry had a right to expect the Whigs would wait and learn the temper of the new Parliament on that question before pressing its consideration, but they saw fit to bring before the House of Commons at the last moment a bill severing Church and State, for the disestablishment of the Irish meant and intended that movement. It involved also the stirring up of additional rancour and bitterness in Ireland. It would unsettle property and make confiscation contagious; and worse than all, it would give England over to Popery, and practically to the rule of a foreign power.

Marshal Serrano, accompanied by seven Generals of the army, entered Madrid to-day in triumph. Great preparations were made for his reception. The streets and buildings, public and private, were superbly decorated, and a large civic and military procession escorted the Generals through the city. The houses, sidewalks and public squares along the route of the procession were crowded with citizens, who received Serrano and the Generals with wild enthusiasm. The procession was followed by a parade and review of the National guard. This patriotic display was made the occasion of striking manifestations of the popular will. The troops carried, side by side with their flags, banners on which were inscribed 'Down with the Bourbons;' 'Sovereignty of the People;' 'Religious Liberty;' 'Free Education,' and other motioes of similar character. At the termination of the review, Marshal Serrano made a patriotic address to the immense multitude of citizens and soldiers, in the course of which he announced that he had united with Gen. Prim in calling Marshal Espartero, Duke of Vettoria, to the head of the State.
